This is another podcast from one of the many podcasts that I like to listen to. This one is from the I Had to Say It podcast.

SAFE-T but no safety

So this bill was passed into law over a year and a half ago. It is just back in the news now because of two factors. 1.) This is a big election year, as most of the seats in the state are up for reelection. 2.) It goes into effect in a couple of months. There is hope that it will get hit in the post election veto session, but I honestly believe that is entirely dependent on how the elections fall out. Anyway I talk about this bill and all the things I see wrong with it. Also with the way people are dealing with it, and potential future ramifications of this. Even if you are outside of Illinois, you are going to want to pay attention to this, particularly if it sticks, it could get ugly.
