692: Government Shutdown, North Korea and Poverty in America

Apparently, a clean bill of health from the president's doctor isn't enough to stop CNN from questioning, among other things, his calcium count.

Can I just ask...is anyone shocked that the 71-year-old narcissist president doesn't have a SINGLE medical issue? I guess it's possible but come on. LOL

All that said, CNN is no longer legitimate news. It's embarrassing to watch.

Let's talk government shutdown. Is it going to happen? I wouldn't be surprised if it did.

Logic might dictate that the Democrats would get shackled with the backlash from a shutdown resulting from their unwillingness to negotiate a short-term stop-gap but if you think that, you'd be wrong.

No, this time the shutdown is happening because the president rejected a deal he said he would accept and Democrats "care" too much about the "children" to allow a funding bill to go through without DACA.

More tough talk over North Korea. This time it's Senator Ted Cruz who said, "It's time for North Korea to fear what America will do next."

But there is one shining light from congresswoman Tusi Gabbard who gave a very clear rationale for North Korea's actions. I'll play you the clip on today's show.
