This is another podcast from one of the many podcasts that I like to listen to. This one is from the I Had to Say It podcast.

The Jab, The Lie, and a Fuel Crisis

In this episode I will talk about the execs from Pfizer admitting, under oath, that they never tested the jab's efficacy in preventing transmission of the COVID virus. That means that every mandate based on the idea of stopping the spread was based on a lie. Which means you might owe some people an apology. Also I did wind up going off on a tangent about the mid 80's mentality of our current governing bodies in relation to the rest of the world and a few implications that it might have on all of our futures.

Go get some gear before we all get blowed up. www.horribledesigins.com
