This is another podcast from one of the many podcasts that I like to listen to. This one is from the I Had to Say It podcast.

A star chart? Really?

Ok so this is kind of a short one. The morons are out in full force supporting Lindsay Clancy, the absolute piece of trash that sent her husband out to run some errands and then strangled their three kids to death with exercise bands. The wine drunk internet true crime experts are all weighing in with their opinions. She didn't do it, she did it but it's not her fault, the husband is framing her because he's a Gemini. I wish that last one was a joke but there are legitimately morons out there who believe that. And have stated so publicly on social media. In long drawn out videos explaining why the position of the sun thirty years ago means the husband framed her. These morons vote. They shouldn't be allowed to. Also Dolly Parton passed away today. That's sad. She was an actual good person, and we could use more of those in the world. I don't get emotional over celebrities, but this one is a bummer. The recipe this week is rhubarb torte from the 1970's cookbook I am so fond of.
