577: Russia and Iran Draw a Red Line

Well, if you're wondering what 96 million dollars worth of Tomahawk missiles bought us the answer is, "not much."

Reports started coming out on Friday that the Syrians resumed launching airstrikes from the airfield we bombed just hours after we finished.

To add insult to injury, Iran and Russia just sent us an ultimatum. In short, they said, if you try that again, we're going to strike back.

This creates problems for Trump. Not only was his strike ineffective but now he risks starting WWII if he takes action again.

This is exactly why you don't start wars you're not prepared to win. Syria is a country that did not attack America and a country that poses no threat to our liberty. We should have left well enough alone.
