This is another podcast from one of the many podcasts that I like to listen to. This one is from the Jason Stapleton Program, definately worth a listen!

Virtue Signaling Has Now Gone Mainstream

"Over the past several years, we've witnessed the collapse of trust in institutions that had been built over decades. Most sensemaking apparatuses were formerly generally accepted by everyone. We're talking about corporate media outlets, universities, public health bureaucracies, etc. Now that they've revealed themselves to be completely captured by political corruption, people are scrambling to find new sources they can trust. This is creating a rise in tribalism as people retreat into their corners.

Now could be a great time for people who value liberty and prosperity to evangelize those without a home.

Yet so many liberty-oriented communities are bogged down in elitism, virtue signaling, and in-group jargon. Not long ago, it seemed like it was the crazy SJW crowd who were inundating us with weird new words, where the complexity and ambiguity seemed to be a feature, not a bug.

Now you can hardly dip your toe into a libertarian or libertarian-adjacent community (like crypto, for example) without finding yourself surrounded by people who seem more interested in advertising their intelligence or ideological purity than in actually providing value or helping people out of bad situations.

Sometimes it seems like the worst enemies of liberty are those who talk about it the most.
