Don't take that statement the wrong way. I'm not being critical or self-righteous. I'm not even suggesting there is anything wrong with being a coward. I'm simply stating that most people are.

It's important we understand this fact because it explains why we have such a hard time getting our message across. Understanding human nature helps us better address the fears and reservations those we seek to influence have.

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez just won an upset victory over a Democratic incumbent who outspent her 10:1. She's also a democratic socialist.

It's further evidence that our education system is broken. Anyone who grew up in this country and thinks socialism is a viable alternative to capitalism needs to have their head examined. It shows a complete lack of historical perspective and even a basic understanding of human nature and economics.

Corporations have amassed more than 6 Trillion dollars in debt. It's a record people. But they're not spending it on new research or long-term growth. What are they spending it on? You'll have to listen to today's show to find out. :-)
