709: A Side of the Refugee Crisis You WON'T hear on the News

If you're like me, the only thing you really know about the refugee crisis hitting Europe is that it's a problem.

Right-wing news claims they are a bunch of twenty-something men who are flooding across the borders of Europe with the intention to cause terror and exploit the countries generous social welfare programs.

But about six months ago I met some folks with a very different story. It's group of seven filmmakers (all women by the way) who traveled to Greece to document the refugee crisis. The story their cameras tell is very different.

Today I've asked three of the women to come on the show to talk about their experience.

The film is due out for release later this year, and you can watch the trailer here:
