

The Jason Stapleton Program - 565: Thoughts on the London Attack and Surveillance State

Posted At : March 23, 2017 12:00 AM | Posted By : Jason
Related Categories: Liberty, podcasts, Jason Stapleton

This is another podcast from one of the many podcasts that I like to listen to. This one is from the Jason Stapleton Program, definately worth a listen!

565: Thoughts on the London Attack and Surveillance State

"

We have more information on the London attack and as I expected this appears to be a lone attacker who's actions were inspired but not orchestrated by ISIS.

For a long time, I've talked about the danger of single, independent attackers executing small terror attacks that yield tremendous results. In the absence of ease to acquire firearms those looking to do harm have simply moved to weapons like vehicles, knives, and hatchets.

It's a dangerous world we live in. Vigilance is required.

It appears the vote on the Republican healthcare bill is still up in the air. As of this writing, the freedom caucus still says there is no deal. My gut tells me this vote gets delayed, perhaps indefinitely. It's a bad bill, and I'll explain why this is not a situation where we should "take an inch."

House Intelligence Committee Chairman Devin Nunes found himself in a bit of a scandal yesterday when he went directly to the president with information about unmasked surveillance conducted on him and his team after the election. I've got a lot to say about this, and it's one more example of the media and the government missing the larger constitutional picture.

All that and the assassination of an exiled Russian MP who found himself on the wrong side of Putin's wrath.

Jason

"

<http://www.jasonstapleton.com>