Typically we don't like to be unnecessarily doom and gloom here at WPI. But our message today is serious as a heart attack. We're living in extremely dangerous times.
We're on the cusp of an economic collapse the likes of which this world has never seen.
While it's impossible to say exactly when it will happen, it's becoming more and more evident that it is inevitable. And we have numerous historical examples of what happens in societies that find themselves in circumstances like those facing our society today. Today, we're going to discuss some of the underlying fundamentals that are driving the economic instability, drawing on observations and insight from Michael Burry, who's most commonly known for being the man portrayed by Christian Bale in the movie The Big Short. There's no way around it: hyperinflation is inevitable. And nothing destroys the wealth of a nation like inflation. If you want to survive the coming crisis, you MUST start preparing now. You cannot wait. Take control of the source of your income and invest in your own human capital. Maximize your value to your community. Insulate yourself by creating a network of likeminded, competent, productive people. Links mentioned by Jason: Sign up for the Price Action Webinar and
